AN UNCONVENTIONAL STORY.

BY CECIL ROSE O'NEILL.

She pushed the door back gently, and entered, holding up her trailing garments in one small hand, upon which were beginning to be discernible the lacing blue veins, slightly protruding, of the woman no longer young. Past the dim light of the little night-lamp in her other hand, she peered with large, eager eyes, then hesitated, a singular pain at her heart.

The mother felt the diffidence a stranger might, at entering her son's apartment sans his invitation. "He is no longer mine," she murmured, "no longer my child—no more my little child,—still, I will see him sleeping as I used. Sleepers and the dead have no unloving words."

Fear of that critical glance which ever so much disconcerted her, fear of him, big, strange and a man, with a subtle sense of shame which she did not attempt to analyze, overpowered her when she had advanced half way across the chamber and constrained her to pause.

Her reflection in a long mirror, confronted her with a strange look, and she stood to observe the beauty of her face, then approaching the bed with silent satin-slippered feet, she placed the lamp upon a little table and seated herself where she could see the countenance of him whom she had come to find.

He slept heavily with head thrown up, and long limbs sprawled beneath the coverings. He snored in a good, round agreeable note, with red, young mouth a little open, his fingers twitching, sometimes, nervously, and his brown, damp hair pushed up upon the pillow in tangled strings.

Silently there passed before the woman's inward sight, swift pictures of his life and hers, touching each other so rarely and exteriorly after the first short years of his childhood.

She seemed to feel his little body curled warmly in her arms so softly forming itself to the rounding of her bosom. His sweet, moist smile, and those forgotten kisses crept into her thought and she sought, quite vainly, to trace those tender, indeterminate, childish features in his strong lineaments, so large, so masculine, so formidable. The light fell sharply on the high jutting nose, the deep shadow of which lay all across her cheek. Long ago, it had been funny to take a tiny nose between the thumb and finger and deliver a little pinch—a thing to laugh over with delight.

Swiftly the pictures succeeded each other. The boy, at school, came before her, youthfully severe, long-legged, father-adoring, who observed her beauty with disapproval and frowned, with dimpling brows, upon her gayety, her sociality in brief vacation days.

The youth was there, more than ever assimilating the spirit of a stern, strange father, accusing her mutely with cold eyes, of frivolity, vanity, lightness, viewing her charmingness, her dainty trappings, the admiration of her crowding friends with silent and impregnable displeasure. After this, the more infrequent meetings; his three traveling years, almost always with the father; the short, constrained reunions in her summer's trips abroad; —their complete estrangement.

The full sense of her bereavement came upon her: she felt herself misconceived irreparably, wronged, a little at fault,—all irreparably.

And yet it was sweet to see him in his childhood's bedchamber, again, —at home, with her.

She glanced about the apartment: his trappings lay in disorder, portmanteau, trunks: from one a serpentine strap depended, trailing across the carpet, its buckle shining like an eye in the light. Everything evidenced his late arrival of the day before.

With a sigh, she rose to go, the excitement of her stolen visit quite evaporated, the depression of unwelcomeness, the flat ache of an old bereavement in its stead.

Very stealthily, she bent over him for a last long regard, then twice started to leave the room and twice turned back, held by the unspeakable attraction the sight of this sleeping man, her transformed child, held for her. Several moments then she stood by him hesitating, and suddenly leaned above him, so as almost to touch him, her lips yearning over his face, when disturbed, he writhed a little, growled, and looked into her eyes.

She withdrew a step, and he sitting up in a confusion of sheets, stared languidly, and said:

"Are you a fairy, an imp o' the night, or anybody's mother, if one may inquire?"

She recoiled: he was not very kind, he disapproved of her visit, of course. She was wounded, but little surprised, and quickly recovering herself, turned partly away and said:

"I was looking for my child. I did not find him. He is gone."

The young fellow put out a moist hand to detain her and caught a strand of her long hair which hung unbound far down the silk of her dressing-gown. It was the first time he had voluntarily touched her, except for the formal cheek-kiss at meetings and partings, for eleven years. She turned slowly to him, essaying to smile, but failing for the bitterness in her heart.

"Tell me," he was saying, "tell me what it is that brings my lovely lady to seek her child at last. Verily, this is a marvelous thing, is it not?"

The bitterness rose like an evil mist from her heart to her lips and converted her smile into an unpleasant thing. Did he not know why she had not sought him? How he had been as steel to advance from her?

Instinctively she lowered her deep eyes to curtain the resentment which leaped from them, and he continued drawing her toward him by her hair.

"At least, do you not owe to one whom you have ruthlessly recalled from the poppied land, a little entertainment? Pray turn on a better light that I may enjoy the visit of one so beauteous, to better advantage, first, and then sit down and talk to me a little, madam, if I may presume to ask it."

She turned on the electric lights, obediently, and then sat herself at the foot of his bed, with that painful smile.

"Your fame as a most charming conversationalist has met me in most distant countries. Chat with me a little, if indeed you should chance not to consider it an unwarranted waste of time and effort, to bestow upon a mere son, a gleam of your infinite variety."

He leaned back and drew up his knees under the bed-wrappings, to rest his elbows on. He laughed an ungracious laugh and apologized lightly for making himself so comfortable in her presence, and then proceeded to peruse his mother's face with a searching regard. Heretofore, he had considered her as properly classified, labeled, as it were, with peculiarities marked down neatly on the tag—beautiful in a way, lambently clever, vain to the last degree and wholly unappreciative of his father and himself (a grievous fault). Thus had he diagnosed her, finished her, as he had thought for all time, written her name upon the list of things disapproved, and laid her upon the shelf of an obscure chamber of his consciousness to be no longer bothered with.

He had outgrown the pangs his disapprobation had erstwhile given him and was very comfortably and flawlessly indifferent. Tonight, he reflected, she had surprised him somewhat, and that she, the carefully and neatly catalogued, could surprise him, the usually infallible cataloguer of types, was to him, at least, singular. Therefore, he invited her to remain, and sat observing her critically, under indifferent, drooped lids, however, that she might not be flattered by his show of interest. With a fine ease, she mastered the indignation which the speeches had aroused and observed him, also, with exterior calmness.

"Can you imagine it," she said, as if speaking more to herself than him, "I sang you to sleep every night for your first six years?"

"How singularly devoted you must have been!"

She did not regard him. "In the night you would bury yourself in my hair, all curled up like a kitten in my arms, and cuddle. See how long it is? There was quite enough to wrap you in. It seems now as if you could not be the same. We loved each other very much then, before your father took into his hands your education—but not so much of personalities. Tell me of the Holy Land —it is so long since I was toward Asia. Tell me something of your journey home?"

* * * * * *

Four hours, they talked, of countries, peoples, churches, mosques, of palaces, of storied places, of the "mysterious east" and esoteric creeds, of philosophy, of the great men whom they had known, of the literatures of many lands, and the young fellow's eyes began to sparkle, so charming did he find his mother, so sweetly did she hang a noble thought upon each memory which they evoked, so wise was she in a high, fine wisdom, sitting like a cultured elegant Lorelei in her rich hair on the edge of his bed.

"Ah, yes," she was saying with a tender seriousness pleasant to observe as her brilliancy, "there is the voice of great thoughts in the cry of cataracts in Switzerland, but oh, there was a brook-bank where the pale spring flowers peeped among the rocks, violets, purple as my baby's eyes, and fine, white blood-root flowers with golden hearts. No grandeur was there in my little brook, no tumblings and roarings out but that quiet conversational ripple which the baby ducks found entertaining,—and you and I. The bluest skies hung over that brook and sometimes, a facetious cloud flung mischievous rain-drops to dimple it, and upon us, laughing and dabbling our feet."

She clasped her little hands around her knees and leaned against the foot of the bed, her chin up and large eyelids drooped as she regarded him, demurely.

He laughed and said, "I remember it."

"You remember it? Do you recall Micawber's saying that David was the 'friend of his youth?'" She continued smiling, "So you were the friend of mine? Ah, we were young, you and I, and we loved each other. You were four and five and six and round and made of pink and white velvet and I was a necessity to you. God was near and kind then. Can you remember our sitting with bare feet dangling to the brook as we said our prayers—?"

"Yes, yes," he interrupted, "we prayed for the little sick duck that ate the rat poison."

"And it got well," she rejoined, "but never grew as big as the rest who were the 'summer boarders" in their little 'white duck suits.' You 'made up.'—

'Quack, quack, quack,
Said Littley Dack.'

"Dack' was more convenient for rhyming purposes than 'duck' so it remained 'Littley Dack' and oh, its voice was four times its size, and when Maggie cooked its brother, it called us bad names whenever we met it on the path to the brook."

"And when I cried after dinner, 'cause I'd eaten the brother's drumstick, you made him say, 'Quack, quack, quack, how cozy it is here inside of Baby Clarence, and I told Littley Dack that he was all right, and she made up."

The young fellow laughed and scratched his head and smiled, then looked at his mother. She had risen and stood by the bed, her lips unsteady and the tears trembling in her eyes.

"A little while after, and you had forgotten me and my youth, had left me with your baby love. You learned a brave lesson from your stern father,—to despise your friend. We said our little happy prayers beside the brook and in a few years I had no prayer left to pray save 'my God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me!'"

She had not intended to let herself be so moved, but the remembrance of the long years of estrangement since that happy childish time had come upon her with too cruel a realization of bereavement. She put her arm over her eyes like a child and stood thus, weeping.

The son bent toward her suddenly with some new emotions battering at his heart. Since his growth to manhood he had quietly catalogued his father as "not altogether satisfactory" and now he seemed to see things very newly indeed.

He experienced a passionate regret at having missed through all his youth, this tenderness, this rare sweet companionship which seemed now revealed to him.

He said quickly, "Mother, why have I not had you before? I might have been a better fellow!"

She looked slowly at him and smiled, though the tears crept down her delicate cheeks, and he would have kissed her hands had he not been to shy.

Then she told him how it had all happened, with not too much bitterness for the father (who perhaps merited a great deal) and as the morning began to insinuate itself through the meshes of the curtains, they sat there hand in hand, while the child-love came back to him and welled up in his heart to meet that mother-love which had at last prevailed, as love ever must prevail, though all the hosts of Darkness fight against it.

The Claim Was Met.

"No," said the lawyer, "I sha'n't press your claim against that man; you can get some one else to take the case or you can withdraw it, just as you please."

"Think there isn't any money in it?"

"There would probably be a little money in it; but it would come from the sale of the little house the man occupies and calls his 'home.' But I don't want to meddle with the matter, anyhow."

"Got frightened out of it, eh?"

"Not at all."

"I suppose the old fellow begged hard to be let off?"

"Well, yes, he did."

"And you caved in, likely?"

"Yes."

"What in creation did you do?"

"I believe I shed a few tears."

"The old fellow begged you hard, you say?"

"No, I didn't say so; he didn't speak a word to me."

"Well, may I ask, whom did he address in your hearing?"

—"God Almighty."

"And he took to praying, did he!"

"Not for my benefit in the least. You see I found the little house easily enough, and knocked on the outer door, which stood ajar, but nobody heard me; so I stepped into the little hall, and saw through the crack of the door a cozy sitting room, and there on the bed, with her silver head high on the pillows, was an old lady who looked for all the world just like my mother did the last time I saw her on earth. Well, I was on the point of knocking again, when she said: 'Come, father, now begin, I am all ready.' Down on his knees by her side went an old white-haired man, still older than his wife, I should judge; and I couldn't have knocked then for the life of me. Well, he began. First he reminded God that they were still His submissive children, mother and he, and no matter what He saw fit to bring upon them they should not rebel against His will. Of course it was going to be hard for them to go out homeless in their old age, especially with poor mother so sick and helpless; and oh, how different it might have all been if only one of the boys had been spared!

Then his voice kind of broke, and a thin white hand stole out from under the coverlid, and moved softly over his snowy hair. Then he went on to repeat that nothing could ever be so sharp again as the parting with those three sons—unless mother and he should be separated! But at last he fell to comforting himself with the fact that the good Lord knew that it was through no fault of his own that mother and he were threatened with the loss of their dear little home, which meant beggary and the almshouse—a place they prayed to be delivered from if it could be consistent with God's will. And then he quoted a multitude of promises concerning the safety of those who put their trust in the Lord. In fact, it was the most thrilling plea to which I ever listened. At last he

THE TICKET THEY MADE.

We are acquainted with very few of the candidates that were nominated on Tuesday. The most of those we know well were defeated, and we sympathize with them in their misfortune—if it is a misfortune—yet we have nothing against a single candidate that was nominated. So far as we can judge, and from what we hear from Democrats as well as Republicans, we believe the ticket is a strong one.

Some weeks ago, in a purely personal way, we tried to say briefly a kind word for 'Squire Britton, because of his kindness to us when we helped to drive cattle, sheep and hogs from Fannettsburg to Strasburg in the early '50's. He was friendly to us then and has been so ever since and we remember him gratefully for his cheery words of kindness when such words were not wasted on us by the peck. He has been nominated and we are glad of it, because we believe he deserves this honor from his party.

As to Mr. Carson our acquaintance with him is more recent, but it has been, thus far, very pleasant, on our side at least. He is a man of much intelligence, and common sense, to say nothing of his large business experience. We believe him to be honest and in every respect competent to honor the position for which he has been named by his party. We belives, also, that neither he nor 'Squire Britton can be swerved from their ideas of right, by the sophistries and wiles of "practical" politicians.

As to the rest of the ticket we have not heard a word against a single man named on it, and we might say the same of nearly all who were defeated. It was out of our power to help or hinder the nomination of any one even if we had been inclined to do either.

It now remains for the Democrats of the county to select from the best men in its ranks, a ticket that shall be equal in fitness and worth to that which was nominated on Tuesday. If this is done Franklin county politics will be respectable, and no one will need to be ashamed of his party or ticket, or to give the latter a hearty support. If both parties have tickets as strong as they should be and can be, there will be no majorities of from 1000 to 2000 to humble one party or intoxicate the other.

UNCLEAN JOURNALISM.

The Republican convention of Tuesday was the culmination of a factional contest which had been going on for a long time. The files of the Republican papers for weeks past will show how it grew in intensity and bitterness. There was nothing pleasant in the thrusts and counter thrusts, the criminations and recriminations, in the charges and counter charges, in the communications laudatory and denunciatory, that filled the columns of those journals. There may have been a sort of vengeful gratification to a few people in these publications but a large majority of all the readers were pained to see such matter in print. It did no good to any one—comforted nobody, but hurt many. The days of "Boomerang" newspaper printing have gone by, except possibly, in a few wild regions of the west where the days and doings of Judge Lynch are still remembered. None of the publishers or writers of these bitter things will find any enjoyment in reading them hereafter. They had better been left unwritten, as they accomplished nothing. Results are just about what they would have been. Saying "you're another" settles nothing—proves nothing.

But it is to be hoped that since the fight is over there will be no more calling of names, raspiness or mud-throwing.

LOOKING BACKWARD.

As to politics THE FRANKLIN REVIEW is a non-partisan, independent paper, though its editor has always been a Democrat, and still believes that the woods and in fact, the whole country, are full of good people of that political faith. We never intended it to be understood that the REVIEW would be neutral ("mutual," as a certain good Republican styled it,) We have felt, and still feel, that we have the right to express opinions on political measures, situations and candidates. The exercise of this belief has cost us a few subscribers and has gained us others, so that the profit and loss account is about balanced.

In the exercise of the privilege, as stated above, the REVIEW took occasion to say, some time since, that it was hard to see what Senator Quay had to do with legislative nominations in this county or how he could be concerned in any way in any local legislation that might be desired or needed. The editor was met shortly afterward on the street by a prominent Republican politician, and in a kindly, patronizing way, was told that he (the editor) knew nothing about Republican politics and that the best thing he could do would be to unite with the party, remain in it a couple of years, keep quiet during that time, be observant and then he might know something to write about.

Looking backward since the convention it seems as though the majority of the Republican party as represented in the convention took the same view of Senator Quay's relation to the legislative ticket of Franklin county that the REVIEW did.

The REVIEW also said something about a certain gentleman being a candidate for county chairman, whereupon a prominent Republican paper drove hard at the gentleman referred to, in Italicised emphasis, and at the REVIEW on account of its "dense ignorance." It was amusedly sarcastic and enjoyed the contemplation of such an unprophetic prophet as the REVIEW, ridiculed the idea of the gentleman referred to having any show whatever of election to the chairmanship.

Looking backward it is seen that the Italics didn't fit the case. The gentleman can be chairman and it is more than probable that he will be. The only question is whether he is willing to assume the arduous labors of the campaign, for which all know he is eminently qualified.

Looking backward we might refer to a number of matters which would discount the predictions, prophecies and promises of a number of experienced Republican prophets and politicians, but we refrain. There are Wigginses in politics as well as on the weather, and the results of the late convention will have the effect of causing the people to believe that the "old prophets" are all dead and the new ones are not inspired.

GENERAL NEWS NOTES

Clipped and Condensed From Our Exchanges.

A demonstration in favor of General Manderson for the presidency was made by Nebraska Republicans at Omaha on Saturday night.

During a fight at Kernersville, North Carolina, Monday morning, Bob Jordan was killed and his son fatally injured by Revenue Officers Smith and Davis, who were also seriously wounded.

Seventy-two pilgrims have sailed from Philadelphia on their way to Jerusalem, where they propose to spend the remainder of their lives amid the scenes followed by association with the earliest Christians.

The cases of Scott Jackson and Alonzo M. Walling, charged with the murder of Miss Pearl Bryan, were partly argued at Cincinnati on Saturday. The question relates to the removal of the prisoners to Kentucky.

The special commission appointed by the New York Supreme Court to determine whether an underground railway should be built in New York city, at a cost of $50,000,000, in accordance with the plans of the rapid-transit board, have reported in favor of the project.

The President on Monday sent to the Senate the nominations of James M. Beck, to be United States District Attorney at Philadelphia; James B. Reilly, of Schuylkill county, to be United States Marshal at Philadelphia, and R. Loper Baird, to be United States Appraiser of Merchandise at Philadelphia.

The Johnson bill permitting national banks to issue circulation to the par value of their bonds was ordered to be favorably reported by the House Banking and Currency Committee Monday by a vote of 7 to 5. The bill limiting the privileges of officers of national banks in borrowing money from such institutions was defeated by a vote of 10 to 1.

Chief Justice Fuller, in the United States Supreme Court on Monday, denied the motion of Senator Hill to reform the judgment in the case of the United States vs. the State of New York, for interest on money advanced the United States at the beginning of the late war, without prejudice to the right of the State to go into the Court of Claims for a judgment upon its claim for interest.

Drink nothing without seeing it; sign nothing without reading it, and make sure that it means nothing more than it says; don't go to law unless you are forced to and have nothing to lose; in any business do not wade where you can't see the bottom; put no dependence in the label on a dog, and count money before you receive it; see the sack before you buy what is in it, for he who buys in the dark asks to be cheated.

The House on Saturday entered upon the consideration of the eighth of the thirteen regular appropriation bills—that providing for the postal service. It is the largest of the supply bills, carrying over $91,000.000. A series of attempts were made to increase the compensation of fourth-class postmasters, but without success. The controverted items in the bill relate to postoffice inspectors and special mail facilities.

The announcement is made that the original of the Goddess of Liberty whose image is stamped upon millions of silver dollars is about to be married. In private life the goddess is Miss Annie Williams, a school teacher, residing on Spring Garden street, Philadelphia. She was selected as the model by the artist himself, and was finally prevailed upon to sit, and after five sittings the design, which is a life-likeness, was finished.

The date upon which Easter comes is fixed by a Canon adopted by the Council of Nice in the year 325. It must be celebrated on the Sunday next after the first full moon falling on or after the 21st of March. This year the moon will be full on the 29th of this month, which will be Sunday, and the next Sunday will be the 5th of April, which will be Easter. This is one week earlier than last year, and within one week of being as early as this movable feast can possibly come.

A Gathering of Legal Learning.

The Dauphin county bar will banquet the Superior Court Judges at the Commonwealth Hotel in Harrisburg next Wednesday evening. Over two hundred invitations have been extended to the members of the bar in the state. Governor Hastings and his cabinet are included among the invited guests as are a number of the ablest lawyers in Adams, Blair, Cumberland, Dauphin, Franklin, Fulton, Huntingdon, Juniata, Lebanon, Mifflin, Perry, Snyder and York counties. Judge Stewart has been asked to respond to the toast "The Bench." It will no doubt be a notable gathering of the best legal talent of the state.

IT WAS A BIG CONVENTION.

A REPUBLICAN FACTIONAL CONTEST SETTLED.

Senator Quay's Views Not Necessary to Guide the Selection of Franklin County's Representatives in the Legislature.—A Few Grievous Disappointments But Many Rejoicings.—A Good Ticket Fairly Nominated.

Since the organization of the Republican party in 1856, when John C. Fremont and William L. Dayton were its standard bearers in the Presidential contest of that year, there has never been so much interest manifested in a Republican convention in Franklin county, as there was in the convention of Tuesday last. There were nearly or altogether fifty candidates for eleven offices and nearly every one of the candidates had made an active canvass. The primaries on Saturday were well attended throughout the county, the people seeming to accept the statement of Judge Stewart months ago, which was widely published at the time, that voters should by all means attend the primaries.

Some of the delegates arrived in town on Sunday evening and by Monday afternoon they were all in town, as were many of the friends of the candidates from every section of the county. Very rarely have more people been seen in Chambersburg at one time than were to be met on the streets, in the hotels and other places, on Monday night.

A number of candidates had opened headquarters in one or other of the hotels early on Monday, and from then until the convention was called these rooms were thronged with delegates and others who were supposed to have influence. Handshakings, smiles and other persuasive influences were used to hold friends already pledged and to make new ones.

It was noticeable that among the delegates were some of the oldest and most effective workers in the party, while many others of this class were present who were not delegates, but probably as useful.

Before night, Monday, the action of the next day's convention as to some of the candidates was plainly foreshadowed, or rather, lifted out of the shadow, especially as to the legislative contest, and yet there were many who regard themselves as reputable political seers, who made predictions as late as Tuesday morning which proved their calculations widely mistaken.

Before 10 o'clock, at which hour the convention was called Tuesday morning, the crowds of Monday evening had been largely augmented. There were politicians, delegates, candidates, everywhere. The town was full, and—incidentally—so were some of the folks.

The armory was crowded before the clock struck ten, and within a few minutes after that time Chairman Seiders called the convention to order. In a very little while the hall was as quiet as it could be gotten and the work of the convention began promptly. Secretary Davison called the list of delegates. Dr. H. G. Chritzman, of Welsh Run, having been previously agreed upon as presiding officer, his name was presented by C. A. Suesserott, Esq. There being no other names presented, Dr. Chritzman was chosen by acclamation. He was escorted to the platform by E. S. Snively, C. D. Buhrman and James B. McAfee. The chairman's speech was laudatory of his party, and predicted its coming resumption of power and the consequent prosperity of the country. He scored the Democratic party for its blundering in the administration of the government, referred exultingly to the victory of the late war, the extinction of slavery and, in fact, waved "Old Glory" to the admiration of his hearers. It was a typical Republican convention speech and was well delivered.

J. M. Saltsman of Lurgan and Henry Lenherr of Hamilton were chosen vice-presidents, and Dr. E. A. Hudson of Mercersburg, Maurice E. Wertz of Quincy, and J. H. Deardorff of Waynesboro, were chosen secretaries.

Hon. T. M. Mahon was nominated for congress by Harry Strickler of Greencastle. Mr. Mahon was authorized to select his own conferrees. Hon. W. U. Brewer was nominated for state senator, by C. A. Suesserott, Esq. Senator Brewer was also accorded the selection of his conferrees. Jonn A. Seiders, Jacob Pensinger, Wm. McDowell, S. C. Plank, R. J. Boyd and M. E. Wertz, were elected conferrees to nominate delegates from this district to the Republican national convention.

Nominations of candidates for the legislature being in order, D. M. Good, Waynesboro; A. Nevin Pomeroy, Chambersburg; W. W. Britton, Letterkenny and Jas. W. Carson, Peters, were named.

The nominations were made on the first ballot the vote being as follows: Britton 119½, Carson 105½, Pomeroy 79½, Good 59½. Many delegates and others had kept tally of the votes, and before the result was announced by the chair, there was very energetic applause throughout the hall, and this continued for some minutes. As soon as the chair could suppress the outburst of approval, J. B. Long, Waynesboro, moved to make the nominations unanimous, which was promptly done. Then followed more cheering, as enthusiastic as that which followed the announcement of the result. There were calls for a speech from Mr. Carson but the chair announced that on account of the great amount of business still before the convention there was no time for speech-making.

The next nomination was for County Treasurer, and the following persons were named: David Maclay, Chambersburg; John Hunsecker, Hamilton; Thad. S. Nevin, Waynesboro, and L. H. Fletcher, Greencastle. Dr. Maclay was nominated on the third ballot, the vote on that ballot being Maclay 99, Nevin 51, Fletcher 32. Mr. Hunsecker's name was withdrawn after the second ballot.

For prothonotary the following were named: R. M. Renfrew, Green; G. A. Hornbaker, Mercersburg; C. M. Hyssong, Chambersburg. Mr. Hornbaker was nominated on the first ballot, the vote being Hornbaker 102, Renfrew 47, Hyssong 33.

The following were named for Register and Recorder: A. L. Shafer, Chambersburg; A. B. Zarger, Antrim; C. C. Kauffman, Greencastle; T. J. Kennedy, Waynesboro; J. H. Ledy, Guilford. Eleven ballots were necessary to nominate. Mr. Kauffman was withdrawn after the third and Messrs. Shafer and Ledy after the tenth. The last ballot was, Kennedy 92, Zarger 90, a very close contest certainly. While the balloting for these candidates was in progress the following committee on resolutions was appointed: Harry Strickler, C. A. Suesserott, Davison Greenawalt, W. F. Skinner, Abraham Strickler.

Before the nomination of Register and Recorder was made the convention adjourned for dinner. At 2.05 it was again called to order when the balloting for Register and Recorder was resumed and finished with the result above stated.

For Clerk of the Courts the following were named: D. L. Grove, D. A. Fohl, Fred Gibbs and W. L. Minick, Chambersburg; S. A. Clevenger, Waynesboro; W. R. Reynolds, Quincy; S. A. Lehman and E. E. Bollinger, Greene. Minick was nominated on the third ballot which stood: Minick, 102; Reynolds, 35; Grove, 21; Bollinger, 17; Gibbs, 7.

For the two offices of County Commissioner there were fifteen candidates. A number of ballots were cast, the details of which would not interest many of our readers. It is enough to state that Milton Crawford of Greene and Henry Grove of Montgomery, were nominated on the sixth ballot.

For Director of the Poor Thos. C. Fuller of Southampton and George F. Summers of Guilford, were named. The ballot was, Summers, 148; Fuller, 34.

For County Auditors there were five candidates: Archibald McCullough of Warren, was nominated on the first ballot, and D. C. Rhodes of Guilford on the fourth. There were three other candidates, Adam Martin and W. E. Holland of Greene, and Snively Coffey of Peters.

The following were elected delegates to the State convention: Dr. O. P. Stoey, Lurgan; A. M. Kann, St. Thomas; Robert S. Smiley, Chambersburg.

It was nearly six o'clock when the convention concluded its labors, and all were glad that the work was done and they were able to get away from the hall. Dr. Chritzman made an admirable presiding officer; one less prompt and efficient would have allowed the proceedings to run into a night session.

The following is the list of delegates who did the work of the convention which will be memorable to a number of Republicans for years to come.

DELEGATES.

It will be a long time before all the scars made by the convention will be salved to perfect healing, and in a few instances the sight of the scars made will always be annoying to those who bear them, but there will be no bolting of the ticket to amount to anything, for a pronounced majority made it, and all agree—Republicans and Democrats—that it is a good, straight, strong ticket.

Following are the resolutions reported by the committee:

RESOLVED, That we reaffim our allegiance to the principles of the Republican party and its attitude with respect to the financial policy of the country, which is in striking contrast to the weak and imprudent policy pursued by the present Democratic administration.

We do most heartily commend the action of Congress with respect to the Cuban question. Its position is the only logical one to be adopted by our nation. We recognize no supremacy except that which comes directly from the people.

It seems fitting that the great Keystone State should present a candidate for President, and we are gratified that this mark of distinction is accorded to the Hon. M. S. Quay. We hereby endorse his candidacy and pledge him our united support.

RESOLVED, That we pledge our support to the ticket this day nominated.

TOWN AND TOWNSHIP.

The Events of the County as Chronicled by "Review" Correspondents—Summary of the Week's News.

QUINCY.

Mrs. Mary, widow of John S. Duey, Quincy, has been dangerously ill since March 1 with pneumonia. She is over three-score and ten years old and her recovery is very doubtful.

Mrs. Annie, wife of Ephraim Dull, Polk Hill, has been confined to her bed the past few weeks with a complication of diseases. We hope she may recover.

Elmer G. Small, Altenwald, intends opening a select school at Ryder's schoolhouse April 6. He is engaged in soliciting the names of teachers who wish to further advance themselves and of others who wish to prepare themselves as teachers. He is highly educated and has the qualifications to make his school a great success.

Mrs. Florence, wife of Postmaster Geo. C. Walk, Quincy, visited Saturday and Sunday at the home of her father, Henry Bowers, and other relatives, Chambersburg.

Sam'l A. and Mrs. Mollie Friedly, gave a party February 24 in honor of the second birthday of their daughter Zula, at their home near Price's church. These relatives and friends were present: Dr. Benjamin Frantz and wife, ex-County Commissioner D. M. Lowery and wife, George Foreman and wife, D. W. Brown, wife and daughter, William Brown, wife and son, Charles Wert and two daughters, Martin Keller and wife from Chambersburg; Miss Alice Coons, Waynesboro; Mrs. Wm. A. Anthony and two sons, from near Shady Grove; Mrs. H. D. Clay, daughter and son, Mrs. Harry Gordon and family, Miss Katie Brown, Miss Sadie Friedly, making altogether 30 some persons who had gathered, and by 12 o'clock a table had been spread with all the good things of life, which consisted of two large roasted turkeys, fruit, ice cream, cakes, candies, etc. When all had been seated around the table a blessing was asked upon the food, then all partook of it with a relish, as they were eating from a table that had been prepared by such good and kind ladies as Mrs. Mollie Friedly and her mother, Mrs. J. C. Foreman, and grandmother of little Zula. After all were through eating, the rest of the day was spent in social talks in which expression was given to the joys of this gathering and for prospects of life, and above for life to come. In short it was an interesting and profitable occasion and many were the fine, costly and valuable presents given to Zula as a remembrance of her second anniversary. Two of the presents were two silver mugs having the word "Baby."

Thursday afternoon, James Funk and John Brumbaugh, two of Quincy township's young men, employed by the Frick Co., in the foundry, were badly burned by hot metal. The metal was run into a shank that was slightly wet and this caused it to splash. The right side of Mr. Funk's right leg and his foot were badly burned. Mr. Brumbaugh's back was burned. Neither of the men can work at present.

Our old veteran at Fox Hill, John B. Rock, was married at the home of Rev. Jonathan W. Miller of the Reformed church of Altodale, to Mrs. Rachel, widow of John Stitely, at six o'clock Sunday evening. Johnny now has the wife but when he brings her to his home at Fox Hill the calithumpian band will give him the grandest serenade a married couple ever received. We surely extend our congratulations to Johnny and his bride.

Monday the township auditors, A. Z. Small, John A. Clugston and Peter Whitmore, met the supervisors in Quincy and settled for 1895. A. D. Monn paid over to the auditors $275.40; D. A. Keckler, $233.47, and Amos Martin had worked over his duplicate, $196.07, which the township auditors paid him. If the Supreme Court decides that the Mont Alto Iron Company must pay its tax the township tax will be paid and $312 will be left in the treasury. If the court decides the tax need not be paid the township will be in debt $513. D. D. Monn and D. A. Keckler are to be praised for paying so much money over to the auditors. No supervisor should overwork his duplicate.

Our friend, Samuel Avery, Funkstown, Friday evening received his voucher from the pension department for $117.59 back pay and $8 a month in the future. He is a poor, hard-working man and the pension comes very good to him

MERCERSBURG.

The time set for our local institute, (Feb. 22,) has come and passed, but we have not had the benefit of this local session and fear the committee is not going to call us together to participate in the exchange of thoughts as pertaining to teaching. We regret that such is the case, when we remember the lively interest annually manifested at this place in this capacity for the last six years, and are strongly impressed that the former record should have been kept up.

It is hoped that the Reformed congregation will soon be supplied with a pastor again. A vote cast on March 1 was unanimous for Rev. Dr. Charles Santee who gives very strong evidences of ability and earnestness.

March 2 was the closing day for the M. E. Sunday school, for the conference year. Besides current expenses and other contributions the school gave $35.18 to the missionary cause. This is better than any previous record. The school continues to thrive under the supervision of Jas. A. Philips, who is serving the fourth year as superintendent.

Our schools have been deprived of the supervision of the principal owing to sickness. Prof. Garnes has been suffering severely for more than a week from rheumatism. He is slowly recovering and it is hoped will be able to resume his position in a week or ten days again. Miss Spangler is the supply and Miss Parker has been conducting and teaching for Mr. Garnes. Harmony and interest still continue.

LURGAN.

On Wednesday of last week the barn, hogpen and corncrib on the farm known as the McClure farm, one mile east of Lurgan, was burned to the ground. The fire was not seen in time to save anything that was in the barn. Mr. Neidig, the tenant, succeeded in getting one horse to the door of the stable, when the wind blew the door shut and frightened the horse back. Mr. Neidig was compelled to leave the stable on account of the fire. Three horses, one calf, six pigs, farming implements, hay and feed were all burned. Mr. Neidig had no insurance on his goods. The farm is owned by Samuel Newcomer who intended to move there in the spring. The day was a very stormy one and the fire was carried across several fields to the buildings of Mr. Joseph Foltz, whose house and barn were both on fire, and were saved only by the persevering efforts of neighbors who succeeded in saving the buildings, although the straw stack was burned from barn yard. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Mr. Benjamin Hostetter was confined to the house several days last week with a sprained ankle.

Rev. J. A. Hamilton who has not preached here on account of sickness for some time, filled all his appointments on this end of the charge on Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. John Mouers of Mouersville, died on Monday. Interment at Otterbein church on Wednesday at 10 o'clock.

Miss Lou Myers arrived home from Dixon, Ill., on Tuesday exening. She has been away about a year, she expects to remain at home during the coming summer with her father, Jacob Myers of Letterkenny township.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Miss Annie Jacoby of Lurgan, to Luther Alleman of Letterkenny township, on Tuesday evening the 17th inst., at 7 o'clock.

The schools of Roxbury closed on Tuesday last. The Centre school at Lurgan closed on Wednesday.

Resolutions of Respect.

At a regular meeting of Col. J. G. Elder Post, No. 578, G. A. R., at St. Thomas, the following were reported by a committee and unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God in His all-wise providence to remove from our ranks one of our eldest and most esteemed comrades, Samuel Diffenderfer, therefore be it

Resolved, That as we know that God's ways are not our ways, and while we sympathize with those bereft, and mourn the loss of our comrade, we humbly submit to His divine will.

Resolved, That the jovial ways and kindly manners of our comrade will be missed in our Post and in the community. But we can look forward to that final roll call when we shall be reunited.

Resolved, That our charter be draped for thirty days, and a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our late comrade, that they be entered on the minutes of the Post, and be published in the county papers.

Committee. { T. T. SIXEAS, MARTIN DETWILER, JACOB WALCK.

The Season's Greatest Musical Event.

Sousa and his celebrated band of sixty members, with Miss Mryta French as soprano, and Miss Currie Duke as violiniste, will appear in Chambersburg on Tuesday evening, March 24th. Since David Blakely prevailed upon Mr. Sousa to resign his position in Washington where he served the Government as leader of the Marine Band; fortune and increased fame have come to the distinguished leader. His success and popularity are certainly as much due to his musical compositions as to his other abilities. The whole country has been humming, drumming and thrumming the "Washington Post," "Liberty Bells," "Directorate," "Manhattan Beach" marches for the last year. The royalty Sousa gets for these pieces is enormous, amounting it is stated, to over $25,000 a year. Besides this rather respectable income, there is a well developed salary for his services as conductor and no small share of the profits of his concert tours. All this has come within three years. So much for getting in touch with the great public.

Sousa undoubtedly knows what the average audience wants in music, and his programmes are constructed with extraordinary tact. The entire range of standard music is in Sousa's library, and his famous marches, without which the Sousa concert would not be complete, will be given as only the march king can give them.

Special trains will be run to Chambersburg over all the railroads. The special on the South Penn railroad will be run from Richmond, returning after the concert, but tickets will be good to return the next day. Reserved seat tickets will be on sale at the following places: Mercersburg, by R. B. Ritchey; Greencastle, by Pitt F. Carl; McConnellsburg, by J. K. Johnston, and at all others town in Franklin and adjoining counties. Tickets will be in the hands of agents before March 20th. All inquires should be addressed to L. Bert Eyster, Local Manager, Chambersburg. The reserved seat chart in Chambersburg will be found at Miller's Pharmacy. Price of seats 50 and 75 cents and $1.00.

WE OFFER our services to the people of Franklin

The Franklin Review.

THURSDAY, MARCH 12, 1896.

A WORD IN PASSING.

Town and County Briefs With a Bit of Comment—Happenings of the Week and a Forecast of Coming Events.

Jacob F. Stouffer and wife of Lurgan township, have executed a deed of assignment on their farm of 59 acres, to T. Z. Minehart, Esq.

Since our last issue a number of friends called, some to pay their subscription, others to subscribe and still others to have job work or advertising done. It is due to the substantial friendliness of such folks that the business of the REVIEW is growing every day. To all these friends our thanks are returned.

The following officers were elected last week by the Waynesboro board of trade to serve one year: D. M. Good, Jun., W. T. Omwake, J. H. Stoner, J. J. Miller, J. R. Ruthrauff, Simon Wiener, H. E. Hoke, I. E. Yost, J. H. Deardorff, J. J. Alter, Ezra Frick, John H. Neal, F. Forthman, J. B. Long and George W. Smith.

On Wednesday afternoon of last week the dwelling of John Bossart in Hamilton township was burned with nearly all the contents, leaving the family in a distressing situation. Only a few articles of furniture were saved. The fire originated from a defective flue. A stack of straw near the barn was burned but happily the barn itself was saved.

A friend writing from Waynesboro and who is employed at the Geiser works writes: The works at our town are running full blast. On March 2d the Geiser gong sounded at 5:30 a. m. and 375 sleepy men rolled out of bed and marched to the works. We are working 10½ hours from 6:30 a. m. to 6:00 p. m. We work up or cut 25,000 feet of lumber from the rough into material for the "Peerless Machine," in one week, or 100,000 per month, turning out 24 separators in a week.

L. C. Reisner who was formerly in the jewelery business in Mercersburg, has been appointed assignee of the estate of Ezra T. Bowman & Co., wholesale dealers in and manufacturers of jewelry, Lancaster, Pa. As an evidence of the estimation in which Mr. Reisner is held among Lancaster business men, he had no trouble whatever in giving security on his bond for $185,000 as assignee. He had tendered to him many more endorsements than he needed. The responsibility of the trust which he has taken is great but Mr. Reisner is a hustler and there is no doubt as to his competency to discharge it.

The forth coming concert in Rosedale opera house tomorrow (Friday) evening, under the direction of Professor Shaw, of Wilson College, will be one of the most popular and brilliant musical entertainments that our people have had the opportunity of enjoying. The program has been carefully selected and includes much that is entirely new to Chambersburg audiences. In addition to the music faculty of the college there will be a chorus of fifty voices trained for the occasion. The concert is under the supervision of more than thirty of the most cultured and estimable ladies of Chambersburg as patronesses. The reserved seat chart can be seen and tickets purchased at Miller's Pharmacy.

The funeral of John H. Typer, late of Littlestown, took place Monday afternoon from his parents' home on Nelson street. The deceased was aged 32 years and 5 months. There were some beautiful floral tributes placed upon the casket by friends and relatives. One was a beautiful wreath with a card inscribed "From Sister," placed upon the casket by the only sister of Mr. Typer, the wife of Rev. Hanna, of Springfield, Illinois; another was a large bouquet from the Y. P. S. C. E., of Littlestown; one from the infant department of the Littlestown Sunday school, a large bouquet from Wm. Alexander, Esq., and a beautiful star and crescent from the pall bearers who were: William Alexander, John W. Hoke, Pearle E. Taylor, Esqs., Wm. H. and Charles Walker, Samuel Elliott, Robert W. McAllen and D. D. Park.

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS.

Items of Interest About You and Our Friends and Those Whom We All Know.

Among the many friends of the REVIEW who were in town during and after the convention were S. D. Simonton and H. N. Boggs of Concord, both of whom it was pleasant to meet.

Mrs. Dr. Hanks, Rays Hill and her sister Mrs. John Sheets, McConnellsburg, made a brief visit to Chambersburg Monday. Both ladies and their families read the REVIEW and have paid for it.

J. W. Fogal, of Neelyton, Huntingdon county, has been spending some days with his nephew, Daniel Bittinger, at Guilford Station. Mr. Fogal is a reader of the REVIEW and likes it for the local news he gets from it.

Mrs. Minnie Shaw, of Philadelphia, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sollenberger, East Washington street. Mrs. Shaw was married in November last and has not been home since the evening of the marriage ceremony.

Miss Bessie Pittman, of Yates City, Knox county, Illinois, is now visiting her aunt, Mrs. John Hege, at Dickey's Station, this county. Miss Bessie is a daughter of Benjamin Pittman, formerly of Fulton county. She has spent several months with her many friends in Fulton and Franklin counties and will return home now soon. She has the kind wishes of many friends for a safe journey.

Congressman Mahon came home Saturday and remained till after the convention; he had no part in it, however. Mr. Mahon has introduced a bill in congress providing for a "Peace Monument" on the ground where Lee surrendered to Grant at Appomattox. The ground is not to extend beyond twenty acres, and the entire cost is not to exceed $75,000. It is thought hardly probable that the bill will become a law at this session.

Sold Goods Fifty-four Years.

J. M. Wolfkill & Son have sold their general merchandising establishment on the corner of Market and Franklin streets to A. L. Crider, who will take charge of the business April 1. Mr. J. M. Wolfkill has been in the business continuously for 54 years, in Orrstown, Upper Strasburg and at his present location in Chambersburg, to which place he moved in 1862. He was burned out in 1864, but resumed business as soon as possible and has continued until now. He is highly esteemed as a citizen, a neighbor and a business man.

Mr. Crider is a thoroughly reliable young gentleman and has had valuable experience gained in years of service in the large establishment of Hoke and Appenzellar. It is safe to predict that he will succeed.

A DESPERATE MURDERER.

Kills an Officer and Holds Many Men at Bay.

A despatch from Bellefonte dated Saturday last gives the following thrilling account of the desperate deeds of a murderer:

For twenty four hours the quiet little village of Woodward, in the eastern end of Centre county, was the scene of a bloody conflict. William Etlinger, who lived there in a little frame house, with his vife and two children, had been a fugitive from justice since last fall. He was under bail tor attempting to kill his wife's father, but when the case was called it was found that he had fled to the mountain fastnesses. When Constable John Barner, who had been sworn in only a few days before, learned on Thursday afternoon that the outlaw had slipped down to his home to see his wife and family he determined to trap him at any cost. Deputizing John Hosterman and C. G. Motz to assist him, they made their way to Etlinger's house.

Arriving there, they found the outlaw, with his wife and babies, barricaded in the second story. Barner called upon him to surrender, but was greeted with derision. With a shout to his men to back him up the constable crashed in one of the panels of the door and crawled through the aperture. Instantly there was a flash from Etlinger's gun, and Barner fell dead with a bullet in his head. Motz and Hosterman fled in terror and told their story. It set the little town ablaze with fury, and a constantly increasing mob of men gathered together, armed themselves with guns, and made for the house. The crowd quickly swelled to 2,000 or more.

As they approached the house a fusilade of shots from the upper window warned them to keep their distance. Both Etlinger and his wife who is almost as bold as he, were armed, and almost constantly firing. Several persons were injured by flying bullets, Frank Guiswhite, who lay sick in his house next door, being shot in the head and shoulder.

Meanwhile the armed crowd without returned the fire steadily. The bombardment was continued throughout the night, but the besieged still held their own, and the assailants grew more desperate. Early yesterday morning ammunition began to run out, and a detail was sent here to procure fresh supplies. They returned with cartridges and rifles. These were too much for the desperado, and he took his family to the cellar when the bullets began to fly clear through the light frame structure.

Sheriff Condo and a posse of sixteen men had arrived meantime, and they then made a raid, but Etlinger and his wife repulsed them with a heavy fire. At one time the woman approached a window in the house and lighted a fuse attached to a dynamite bomb, which she meant to hurl into the crowd. A dozen guns were leveled at her, and she quickly disappeared.

Eventually it was decided that the only resource was to set fire to the house and drive the brandit out. There was hesitation about this, because of the woman and children, but the mob was fast becoming uncontrollable, and refused to listen to reason. To avenge Barner's death seemed to be the one thought, and they would listen to no plans of moderation. Shortly after the noon hour some one seized a torch and applied it to the frame walls of the house. Instantly the wood ignited, and in a moment the flames were leaping high in the air. But Etlinger continued to fire into the crowd, and yelled defiance at his pursuers.

The flames had eaten their way half through the roof when a cry of gladness announced that the children had escaped from the building. After a few moments of rapid firing the woman appeared at the cellar door. A thousand voices shouted to her to come out, promising her safety, but she answered that she must die with her husband.

"Let him come out, then, and we will not shoot him!" was the cry.

The answer was a yell of derision and a volley from the outlaw. The woman was on her knees, pleading with her husband to surrender, while the rifle bullets whizzed within three inches of her head. Finally she wrenched herself free and ran. Etlinger fired three shots after her, but they were wild, and she was uninjured. Her ankles had been bound together, so that she could not escape.

It was then that Etlinger realized that his time had come. With a grin of defiance he thrust his head from the cellar door, climbed to the ground and drew himself up to his full height. Then 200 rifles were raised and leveled at him, but only two shots rang out. Before they had time to press their triggers he raised his own weapon and sent two bullets into his brain. A moment later his body, riddled with bullets, toppled over into the flames.

Almost immediately after there was a tremendous report, and what was left of the burning structure went in fragments high into the air. Four hundred pounds of dynamite which he had kept in the cellar had exploded.

Barner's dead body was recovered. The top of the head had been crushed in by bullets and the throat was cut from ear to ear.

Sale Postponed.

On account of the inclement weather of yesterday the sale of Jacob H. Hinkel near Butler's school house, St. Thomas township, has been postponed to Wednesday, March 18.

We Have Sunday Mail Service.

In obedience to an order from the Postoffice Department at Washington, Postmaster Houser had the office in this place open on Sunday afternoon for an hour and the patrons of the office were served as on other days. It is said the order was issued by the department in response to a petition of the business men of the town. From what we can hear from individuals and of the action of the churches on Sunday, the order does not meet with the approval of our people by any means. In a number of the churches the sentiment against Sunday mail service was expressed in unequivocal terms. There is no doubt that many others outside the churches are also opposed to the service which they regard as needless and a desecration of the Sabbath day.

It is altogether proble that a larger petition will go the Washington asking for a discontinuance of the service, than was that upon which the service was granted. It may be considered "a littie slow" to oppose Sunday mails, but we are of the many who do not think Sunday service necessary here in a business or other point of view, and hope that petitions may go to the department which will have the effect of discontinuing that service,

DEATH'S DOINGS.

Those Who Have Passed to the Great Beyond—The Death Record in Franklin County and Elsewhere.

Robert Harper died at his home near Shade Gap on Thursday morning, February 27, aged 61 years and a few days. Mr. Harper was a soldier in the 149th Penna. regiment, under Captain Brice X. Blair. His Arm Torn Off.

On Tuesday morning Ed. Frommeyer, son of Augustus Frommeyer, of Stoufferstown was operating a fodder-cutter when by some means his hand caught in the belting and the arm was so nearly torn off that amputation was necessary. The young man has many friends who will regret exceedingly to learn of the misfortune which has maimed him for life.

Huntingdon Politics.

We note with interest the announcement of Dr. Jones, over in Huntingdon county, as a candidate for the legislature. We have known the doctor intimately for more than thirty-five years, first as his teacher when he was a mere lad, next as a diminutive soldier boy, when he rode by our side through the wilds of Virginia, next as an associate in the mercantile business, later watched him climb by inherent worth to an enviable standing in the medical profession and lastly as a scientific and successful farmer, and although we always differed politically, he being a stalwart Republican and we an unterrified Democrat, it gives us pleasure to bear testimony to his upright character, and his sterling qualities as a man and citizen. He is a positive man, with convictions on most important subjects, and what is more he has the courage and ability to express them.

Huntingdon county people, irrespective of party, would make no mistake in making Dr. Jones one of her representatives, and as the return of the Hon. P. M. Lytle, who has represented them so ably in the last three sessions seems a foregone conclusion, the old county would be represented, in point of ability, in a manner eminently creditable to her good name and fame.

All that we have said above does not indicate that we would step out of the ranks of the unterrified to vote for the doctor, but we are free to sum up all that has been stated above by saying that he is a hustler.

UNITED BRETHREN CONFERENCE.

It Met in Annual Session in Carlisle on Thursday.

The U. B. conference of this district convened in Carlisle on Wednesday of last week. The conference consists of the counties of Adams, Cumberland, Franklin, Fulton and York, Pa.; and Baltimore and Carroll counties, Md. In the conference there are 12,000 communicants, 75 ministers and 50 lay delegates. Owing to physical injuries received in Chicago some days ago, Bishop Castle who was to have presided, was not able to be present. In his absence the first session opened with Bishop Dickson in the chair. He conducted the opening exercises with prayer and reading a psalm. Rev. J. R. Hutchison was chosen secretary; Rev. W. H. Weaver, statistical secretary, and Rev. Colestock, vice president or associate chairman. The conference committees were then announced, after which the local and supernumerary preachers were called and passed.

The sermon in the evening was delivered by Rev. I. H. Albright to a large and attentive congregation

Thursday morning's session was opened with devotional services by Rev. J. H. Young A great deal of formal routine business was transacted during the day, including reports of committees, introduction of visitors and recommendations for license to preach. The name of Rev. J. D. Killian was ordered to be erased from the list of ministers as he had withdrawn from the church in a manner not provided by the church rules.

Presiding Elder Anthony of Chambersburg district, read his report which was very interesting. The pastors of the district then read their reports which were all approved.

Rev. C. A. Burtner Presiding Elder of Baltimore district, read his report which was also heard with interest and adopted.

Rev. J. A. Kitzmiller conducted the opening exercises of the afternoon session. Several ministers of other denominations were then received as advisory members and several were introduced. After continuing the examination of members, the committee on applicants reported favorably. An executive session was held to hear a special report on the accounts of D. W. Crider who had been missionary treasurer.

A resolution was then adopted disclaiming any connection, past or present, with a certain co-operative insurance company called "The U. B. Mutual Aid Society of Lebanon."

The annual missionary services was held in the evening and was an eminent success. Rev. Weekly of Dayton, Ohio, made the principal address. After other addresses the collection was taken; it was a most liberal one.

Bishop Castle being present opened the next day's session. He was cordially welcomed and gave an able and well-timed address. Rev. W. O. Grimm read his report on missions which was quite encouraging and was heartily adopted. H. B. Spayd read a report on education, which was adopted. D. K. Appenzellar, Chambersburg, treasurer of one of the church funds reported a surplus on hand. This was promptly voted to "The Old People's Home." The account of W. A. Dickson, Chambersburg, was audited, the committee reported and report was adopted. It was decided to change the name of the church paper "Search Light" to "Missionary Search Light."

Quite a number of visitors from Chambersburg were present at the afternoon session. Bishop Kephart of Baltimore, also arrived.

The treasurer's report shows an income of $5993,24 for missions, the largest contributor being the First U. B. church Sunday school of Chambersburg.

Capt. Pratt, of the Indian school at Carlisle, was introduced. Revs. C. A. Burtner and J. P. Anthony were re-elected presiding elders. A. H. Rice was elected as a member of the board of missions. E. H. Hummelbaugh was received into the itinerancy. W. H. Lutz was made a member of the missionary committee.

The Y. P. C. U. had their jubilee in the evening. The addresses and music, in fact the entire session, was a crowning success. The address of Rev. W. H. Washinger was excellent.

Rev. W. Quigley conducted the devotional exercises Saturday morning. Rev. J. P. Anthony reported as secretary of the benevolent fund. J. O. Clippinger reported as conference treasurer; the report was received and he was re-elected. After several ministers had been introduced to the conference the lay delegates reported that they had named A. F. Snoke, A. H. Rice and W. A. Lutz as candidates for delegates to the next general conference, from Chambersburg district. The following ministers were also named: J. Dickson, A. H. Rice, J. P. Anthony, C. A. Burtner, W. H. Washinger, A. R. Ayres, C. J. Stearn, J. L. Grimm, I. H. Albright, J. R. Hutchinson, H. A. Schlichter and W. J. Houck.

Rev. Spayd read the report on education which was adopted after discussion. The report of Lebanon college was read by President Bierman.

Rev. J. W. Houseman conducted the devotional exercises for the afternoon session. Rev. J. H. Albright was elected corresponding secretary for the U. B. Seminary. The Sabbath school committee reported through the State Secretary Rev. C. J. Kephart, who made an excellent speech. J. H. Young was elected Professor of the Russell Biblical chair, and W. A. Lutz, Bishop Kephart and J. W. Shelly, trustees of Lebanon Valley College. Rev. J. B. Weidler was re-elected corresponding secretary of the Historical Society.

The next conference will be held in Salem church, Baltimore, according to vote of the conference.

CHURCH AND SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The Lesson For Sunday, March 15.

International Sunday school lesson for Sunday, March 15, 1896, from Luke 11: 1-13. Title: Teaching About Prayer. Golden text: "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you."

According to the view here accepted, the visit to Martha and Mary at Bethany, near to Jerusalem immediately followed the parable of the Good Samaritan, and came just before the Feast of Dedication. Probably the healing of the man born blind and the subsequent discourse belong to this visit, though many place them just after the Feast of Tabernacles. At all events, the withdrawal into Perea occurred after the Feast of Dedication and this lesson seems to belong to the early part of the period. The place where this model of prayer as given in the lesson was taught to the disciples and which still comprehends all that may be considered essential in prayer, is thought to have been in Perea, though some think it was near Jerusalem while Christ and His disciples were on their way to Perea. Upon the request of the disciples that he would teach them to pray He gave them what we know as the Lord's Prayer, which Luke gives in a much more condensed form than that given by Matthew. The Lord's prayer, however, or the prayer of our Lord, is given in the 17th chapter of John, and is probably the most beautiful passage in the New Testament.

Want of time prevents us from giving anything further on the lesson than Bishop Warren's "Teaching Points" on "The true essentials of prayer." If we consider these as we should the lesson cannot be without great value to us:

A recognition of God's fatherhood, hence our sonship, our family relation, the power of heredity, the oneness of interest and effort, the responsiveness of mutual affection.

2 Worship. Onr age demands ideas, instruction, exhilaration. Reverent worship is as profitable and necessary. The toning of the spirit to lofty admiration is a most profitable service.

3. Absorbing interest in the affairs of God's kingdom. Its coming is more important than our welfare. It is our greatest interest. God's will done on earth as in heaven is our greatest profit.

4. We recognize our dependence even for daily bread. "Give it us constantly." When we consider Christ's larger ideas of bread, the hunger is intense and the dependence complete. Selfishness is even here excluded; for we are to ask, not for my, but "our," bread.

5. Humility is necessitated, for we have sins to be forgiven, and the spirit that forgives those that trespass against us leads us to expect forgiveness from God. Most Christians are great sinners in not coming up to God's possibilities of privilege in him, and effectiveness for others.

6. Lead not into such temptation as shall result in fall. Godet seems to have expressed it best. "If the occasion be present, may the desire be absent. If the desire exist, may the occasion be absent."

After statement of essentials in prayer comes an illustration. Importunity overcomes sleep and unwillingness. It is to tried on God's more than willingness.

Out of his own experience Christ tries to teach men the beauty, necessity and advantage of prayer. It seems as if the joy of a new discovery of its value had come to him, and in his ecstatic ardor he seeks to persuade others to try it.

Women's Christian Temperance Union.

A publican and his wife attended religious meeting, when the preacher's text was, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" and were convinced of sin and their need of a Saviour. The wife made no secret of her desire to be at peace with God, but the man tried to hide his strivings of conscience. At night in bed he tossed restlessly about and sighed and groaned, but his wife knew what was the matter. It was the public house. "Jim," said she after a while, "how much do you reckon you made a year by the house?" "£300," he replied. "How long is it to run?" "Twenty years or so." "Then that means £6000, eh? "How much do you reckon your soul is worth, Jim? Is it worth £6000?" Jim was quiet for a few minutes, then he said, "I shall put up the shutters to-morrow," and went to sleep, and the next day took measures to abandon his trade as a publican.—National Temperance Advocate.

The Journal des Debats has recently called attention to some interesting figures respecting the consumption of champagne. According to published statistics, it seems that the entire quantity of this wine drunk throughout the world is about 21,000,000 bottles per year. England heads the list for consumption of the sparkling wine, America comes next, and Russia also occupies a prominent place. It is instructive to note that of all people in the world the French themselves drink the least champagne. But then, as the Journal des Debats pertinently remarks, it remains to be learned whether the liquor consumed in huge quantities by the English and Americans and Russians ever saw the country of champagne at all. One might almost hazard an answer with regard to a good deal of it. It hails from the land of gooseberries and chemicals.

Speaking to a Catholic temperance association in Armagh on "Drunkenness" recently, his eminence Cardinal Logue said, 'that almost every evil with which mankind in these countries was afflicted could be traced to this terrible sin, and there was no instrument which the Devil could use more effectually for the ruin of souls than the terrible poison of drink. The sad effects of the crime of drunkenness might be observed from day to day by taking up the newspapers in which they might read with horror the reports of crimes which were a shame and a disgrace to civilization, all of which could be traced to over-indulgence in intoxicating drinks. It was truly a grand thing to belong to a temperance association, and a great point gained to have a splendid one established amongst them."—Scottish Reformer.

"There is a drink in the affairs of men, which taken at the bar; leads on to trouble, cares and misery, but, taken at the pump leads on to happiness and peace."—North Carlina Baptist.

"Politics has a German vote and an Italian vote and an Irish vote and a brewer vote and a saloon vote. Is it not about time to have a Christain vote?"—The Epworth Herald.

An Enterprising Journal and Its Energetic Reporter.

It was a bold stroke of journalistic enterprise for the Pittsburg Times to find a suitable man and within four hours after his assignment have him on the way to the Russian oil fields of Baku to get for that paper all the news possible of that, thus far discovered, most extensive and productive oil field of the world.

The gentleman sent on this journalistic mission is Bion H. Butler of the Times staff, who, in four hours after he was spoken to on the matter by the managing editor, was on his way to the region of the Caspian 7000 miles away. Mr. Butler left Pittsburg January 6, for the Caspian region; went to New York then left for London on the St. Paul, just after she had killed nine people by the explosion of some of her pipes.

After detentions at ports, and being snowbound in railroad trains in the Balkan mountain region of European Turkey, and other vexatious delays everywhere, he arrived safely in that oil region whose wells spout infinite quantities of petroleum as good, and capable of as great refinement as the best of the product in the United States.

And on Sunday Mr. Butler was back in The Times office at Pittsburg to tell the readers of that paper the wonderful story of his travels—and it is a wonderful story—and the story of the seemingly inexhaustible supply of illuminating oil which will probably erelong still further reduce the price of our home produced petroleum by cutting off our market from the ports of western Europe.

The Times is an enterprising paper and it is fortunate in having so courageous, intelligent and physically able a representative as Mr. Bion H. Butler.

Grand Army Orders.

The following is Department Commander Cumings' order for the next annual encampment of the G. A. R., Department of Pennsylvania:

"The 13th annual encampment of the department will be held at Chambersburg, June 3 and 4 next. The comrades and citizens of that historic place, which suffered so severely from the ravages of war, promise a cordial welcome and a generous entertainment to all who may participate on that occasion. The proximity of Chambersburg to Gettysburg, Antietam, Winchester and other "fields of daring and glory," offers unusual facilities for visits to these reminiscent scenes. The hotels will receive guests at reasonable rates. Tents will be pitched on beautiful lawns for those comrades who prefer to live under canvas. Posts and comrades desiring accommodations will receive full details on addressing Comrade E. L. Wesley, chairman committee of accommodations, Chambersburg, Pa.

"Officers and comrades of posts are urged to familiarize themselves with the rules and regulations and with orders from national and department headquarters. Much needless correspondence with headquarters could be avoided if closer acquaintance was made with the laws and orders. A copy of the rules and regulations was recently mailed to every post, and the orders are sent regularly as issued—instances multiply wherein commanders and other comrades write for information which is so plainly printed that no construction other than those expressed could be made. The "Blue Book," which is a compendium of Grand Army law, with opinions and decisions on all questions that have arisen or that can possibly arise, should be in possession of every post; a reference to its pages would settle most queries promptly and without correspondence or delay."

As To Funerals.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Ministerial Association of Chambersburg on Monday, March 2:

Resolved, That the ministers' Union of the town of Chambersburg, do respectfully and earnestly recommend to our various congregations the following suggestions and requests with reference to the conduct of funeral services.

1. That funerals be held week-days and not on Sundays, unless unavoidable.
2. That the public viewing of the body be discouraged.
3. That, in order to reduce expense, and to secure the most appropriate, respectful and unostentatious burial of the dead, the interment be privately performed by the minister in charge, after the funeral service, and at the convenience of the family.
4. That pastors be always consulted by the family bereaved, before the hour of the service and before other arrangements shall be definitely decided upon.
5. That the services begin promptly at the hour determined upon.
6. That whenever practicable, addresses at funerals be dispensed with as little calculated to profit or to conduce to the comfort of all concerned. Our reasons for this last suggestion we venture to present somewhat fully. As a rule, private houses are ill adapted to the delivery of addresses. The speaker is usually placed where he can see few or none of his hearers. Many of the latter are frequently too far away to hear with satisfaction and profit. Those who are compelled to stand during the services become increasingly uncomfortable and inattentive. The services are too often protracted to exhaustion both for speaker and those who especially mourn. The temptations to undue eulogy or to unwise avoidance of the truth are great, and the opportunity is made the greater for a display of morbid curiosity or of unfeeling criticism.

Resolved, That these recommendations and suggestions be published in our local papers.

When the value of the patterns is considered the subscriber actually gets

Demorest's Magazine Free,

And what a magazine it is! For 1896 it will be more brilliant than ever before. New management, new methods, new ideas. Each copy contains an exquisite reproduction in colors of some celebrated picture by a famous artist, worthy to adorn the walls of the most refined home. It is affirmed that DEMOREST'S is the only complete Family Magazine published combining all of the most excellent points of its contemporaries, besides having inimitable features of its own. DEMOREST'S is actually a Dozen Magazines in one.

It is a Digest of Current Events and Ideas for the busy man or woman, a Review and a Store-house of Interest for all. Wives, mothers, sisters and daughters can find exactly what they need to amuse and instruct them, also practical helps in every department of domestic and social life, including the furnishing and ornamenting of the home, embroidery, bric-a-brac, artistic and fancy work of all kinds, etc., etc., and suggestions and advice regarding the well-being and dressing of their own persons.

The scope of the articles for 1895 and 1896 will cover the whole country and its various interests, and the articles will be profusely illustrated with the finest engravings, and, in addition, it will publish the best and purest fiction. It treats at length Out-of-Door Sports, Home Amusements and Entertainments; it gives a great deal of attention to Children's Department, and "Our Girls," and has a Monthly Symposium by Celebrated People, in which are discussed important questions of the hour of interest to the older readers.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The TIMES is a newspaper for intelligent men and women who want to read all the news of the world every day. The paper has distinguishing merits of its own. It is neither sensational nor dull. It is not sour-tempered. It is not frivolous or visionary. It sees plenty of good in the world and tells about it. It tells of the bad when it must, but not unwholesomely. It prints with fullness the record of human endeavor in many fields outside of business, politics and war—in literature, religion, science, art, sports and household matters. No paper in the country prints so many book reviews and so much book news. No paper has so complete a financial page—a daily manual for investors and officers of financial institutions. Its market reports—wool, cotton, breadstuffs, farm products, &c.—are the best in the country.

The Democracy of THE TIMES is of the old-fashioned sort—as old as Thomas Jefferson; majority rule, no bossism, no machine tyranny, the divorce of politics from private money-making, a sound currency, industrial emancipation, and every-day honesty. To promote the advance of the Democratic party along these lines it labors with heart and conscience and all its might.

THE NEW-YORK WEEKLY TIMES.

The subscription price of THE NEW-YORK WEEKLY TIMES is one dollar a year. THE WEEKLY TIMES is a capital newspaper. It contains all the current news condensed from the dispatches and reports of the daily edition, besides literary matter, discussions upon agricultural topics by practical farmers, full and accurate market reports of prices for farm produce, live stock, &c., and a carefully prepared weekly wool market.

ESTABLISHED 1836.

PUBLIC LEDGER,

PHILADELPHIA.

GEORGE W. CHILDS, Editor and Proprietor from 1864 to 1894.
GEORGE W. CHILDS DREXEL, EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

Special Offer to Ledger Readers.

The PUBLIC LEDGER has had prepared a large Post Office, County, Township, and Railway Map of Pennsylvania complete to date. This map is given free to subscribers for two months to the Daily Edition or one year to the Saturday (weekly) Edition of the LEDGER.

The map, which has on its reverse side a complete map of the United States, has been adopted by numerous school districts in the State, and is the best and latest map issued. It is worth much more than the price of subscription but is given away freely to subscribers to introduce the paper to their notice in the firm belief that those who become acquainted with the merits of the New LEDGER will not be willing to give it up.

During 1896 the PUBLIC LEDGER'S former high place in journalism will be not only maintained, but advanced by improvements in every department, in the extension of its news service, literary attractions, and special features. To enable the publisher to make the proposed improvements, and to meet the steadily and rapidly growing circulation of the LEDGER, Messrs. Hoe & Co. have constructed for it and are now erecting four new Sextuple Presses of the latest and most approved design. These presses will increase the facilities for rapid printing 25 per cent., enhance the typographical appearance of the paper, and give more distinct impressions.

The LEDGER is first of all a newspaper giving all the news of the day, classified and in complete form. In the PUBLIC LEDGER every statement is verified, its news is therefore thoroughly reliable.

Outside of its news department (which includes special correspondence from all the important cities and towns in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware) the LEDGER is an illustrated family newspaper of exceptional interest and value, giving special attention to domestic affairs, religious news and comment, social events, games, sports, the fashions of the day, literary, art, farm and garden, scientific and labor notes, building society notes, etc.

To its Special New York and Washington correspondence, long since rendered famous, it now adds letters from the chief Capitols of Europe.

Its financial news and market reports are complete and reliable.

The Saturday issue is a great compendium of every phrase of social life, containing reading matter to suit every taste, compiled specially for the Saturday Edition of the LEDGER. Its treatise on the International Sunday School lesson is alone worth the price of subscription.

Its classified advertisements are as interesting as news and as widely read. The public has for years made the PUBLIC LEDGER its chief vehicle for the announcements of births, marriages, and deaths.

Agents wanted; liberal commissions paid. Address Circulation Department the LEDGER for terms.

WRITE FOR RATES FOR CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS. SUBSCRIPTION PRICES AS FOLLOWS:

The DAILY LEDGER (Sunday excepted), by mail, to any address in the United States or Canada, 50 cents per month; $6.00 per year.
